During 1997, Statistics South Africa was commissioned by the Secretariat for Safety and Security to undertake a comprehensive survey on victims of crime in South Africa.

The survey was conducted during March 1998 and a report analysing the data gathered published by Statistics South Africa in December 1998. This is available on request, or can be accessed on the Stats SA website, situated at www.statssa.gov.za.

This statistical release provides the results of the survey in tabular format. It is intended mainly for specialist users of statistics intending to explore the data for purposes of further research.

As indicated overleaf, the data and metadata set from this survey has also been made available to those who require it.

VICTIMS OF CRIME SURVEY, 1998: KEY FINDINGS

In the developing world, including South Africa, inhabitants are at a high risk of experiencing incidents of crime. The victims of crime survey has revealed that during 1997, 21% of all households had experienced at least one household crime, and 15% of individuals aged 16 years or more had experienced one individual crime (see Definitions of Crimes on page 9). The most common household crime in South Africa, in common with most other countries, is housebreaking and burglary, experienced by 7% of the households during 1997. What is surprising is the high incidence of livestock theft (15%) experienced among households which have access to livestock.

Table A summarizes the main findings regarding household crimes during 1997. It shows the percentage of all households that had experienced a particular crime, as well as households which owned or had access to specific property. For example, Table A shows that among the 2.4 million households which owned or had access to motor vehicles during 1997 (see column 3), approximately 105 thousand (see column 4) had experienced at least one incident of motor vehicle theft (4%; see column 6). The shaded blocks in the table indicate that access is irrelevant since all households can be victims of the particular crime indicated in column 1. For example, all households can be victims of attempted housebreaking.

Table A shows that 300 thousand households (3%) of the total number of 9,1 million households in the country had experienced attempted housebreaking. An interesting feature of the table is the higher incidence of bicycle theft (11%), compared with theft of motor vehicles (4%) among households which had access to bicycles and motor vehicles respectively.

Table A: Proportion of households which had experienced at least one incident of crime during 1997, by type of crime

Table B summarizes the findings regarding individual crimes for 1997. For example, it shows that 3% of individuals aged 16 years or more (809 thousand) had experienced at least one incident of fraud; while just one in every fifty (2%) individuals had experienced at least one incident of corruption during 1997.

Table B: Proportion of individuals aged 16 years and over who had experienced at least one incident of crime during 1997, by type of crime.

Type of individual crime	Number of individuals	Individuals that experienced at least one incident in 1997	Percentage %

Any crime	26 708 918	3 886 893	14.6

Figure 1 shows that 21% of households in South Africa had experienced at least one crime in 1997. Housebreaking and burglary was the most common crime, experienced at least once during this time by 7% (652 thousand) of the households. One in every two hundred households had experienced at least one incident of deliberate killing or murder during 1997. Almost 5% of households (447 thousand) had experienced at least one incident of livestock theft during the same year.

Figure 2 shows that during 1997, 15% of people aged 16 years or more (about 3,8 million) had experienced at least one individual crime. The most common type of crime against individuals was theft of personal property, since 5% (1,3 million) had experienced at least one incident of this kind. More than 4% (1,1 million) of individuals aged 16 years or more experienced at least one incident of assault, which makes it the second most common individual crime during 1997.

One in every 250 individuals (0,4%), aged 16 years or more had experienced at least one sexual offense during 1997.

TECHNICAL NOTES

The survey

The Victims of Crime Survey is the first national survey of its kind in South Africa. It can be used as a benchmark against which future surveys of the same nature can be compared. Quite a number of victimization surveys have been conducted in the country in the past. None of these surveys covered the whole country and most of them were not household surveys. This particular survey focused on the household, thereby enabling us to link the characteristics of the household, the victim and the crime. Household surveys of victimization are conducted the world over to inform policy on crime prevention and to gauge people's perceptions of the efficiency of the criminal justice system.

Crime statistics compiled from police records are unable to paint the full picture of crime and victimization, as many crimes go unreported. Whereas victimization surveys cannot replace police statistics, they provide supplementary information on the total picture of crime from the point of view of the victim.

The Survey was conducted by adapting the methodology and questionnaire of the United Nations Interregional Crime Research Institute (UNICRI) to meet South African requirements.

Purposes of the survey

The purposes of the survey were to:

- provide an accurate picture on the nature, extent and patterns of crime in the country, from the victim's perspective;
- determine victim risk and victim proneness, so as to inform the development of crime prevention and public education programmes; and
- assess people's perceptions of services provided by the police and the courts as components of the criminal justice system.

Methodology

The survey was conducted by administering a questionnaire in face-to-face interviews to a randomly selected member of a sampled household (see below). From each household, a person aged 16 years and over was randomly selected to be the respondent. The selected individual was referred to as the target person. Once a respondent had been selected, interviewers had to make sure that only him/herself was interviewed. In case of non-contact, repeated callbacks (at least three) were made before the questionnaire could be returned as a non-contact. There was no substitution done in case of refusals or confirmed non-contact.

Sampling

A total sample made up of 4 000 people, each aged 16 years and above was obtained as follows:

- A probability sample of 800 enumerator areas was drawn from a sampling frame of 86 000 enumerator areas as demarcated in the 1996 population census.
- The sample was explicitly stratified by the nine provinces and implicitly stratified by the 42 police areas in the country.
- From each of the 800 enumerator areas, a systematic sample of five households was selected for interviewing.

- One respondent aged 16 years and above was selected from each of the five households. Once a respondent had been selected, the interviewers made sure the he/she was the only one interviewed in the household and not someone else. There were no substitutions in case of non-contact or refusals.

Weighting of the results

The results of the survey were weighted to the total population of the country using the 1996 population census figures as a base. Two different sets of weights were used, i.e. household weights and individual weights. These two sets of weights were used to raise the household and individual questions in the questionnaire to the relevant target population, respectively.

- Questions asked on crimes committed against households were weighted to the population of households in the country, while those asked of crimes committed against individuals were weighted to the total population of individuals aged 16 years or more.
- When weighting household crimes a couple other factors were also taken into consideration, i.e. police area and EA type (urban formal, urban informal, non-urban traditional, commercial farms and other types of non-urban areas, for example, small villages or mission stations).
- Additional factors taken into account for individual weights were population group, age, gender and population growth.

DEFINITIONS OF CRIMES

The definitions of the crimes covered by this survey are based on the terminology used by UNICRI in other international victimization surveys. They differ to some extent from the vocabulary used by the South African Police Services when recording crimes, or from the terms used to describe crime in the South African criminal justice system.

A clear advantage of using the UNICRI terminology is the ability to compare the results of this survey with those of similar surveys conducted in other countries. The other advantage is that the terms used in the classification of crimes for the international victimization surveys are more easily understood than the complicated legal phrases used in the criminal justice system.

For the purposes of this survey, crimes have been divided into 2 major categories: household crimes and individual crimes. Each of the two categories is further divided into violent and non-violent crimes.

Household crimes:

These are crimes committed against a household. For example, burglary of property from a dwelling is a crime that is committed against the whole household rather than an individual, since all members usually share household goods.

Violent household crimes

- Deliberate damage, burning or destruction of dwellings: Includes acts of deliberately damaging, setting fire to, or destroying other people's dwelling/s for political or other reasons; but excludes forced removals.
- Deliberate killing or murder: Includes deliberately inflicted death which could have happened during the act of committing another crime. It is regarded as a household crime because the individual to whom it happened cannot report the occurrence
- Hijacking/Attempted hijacking of motor vehicles: occurs when someone steals or attempts to steal a car, van, truck or bakkie by force, when any member of the household is inside or just outside the vehicle.

All violent household crimes are 'contact' crimes (where the perpetrator comes into contact with the victim), except for deliberate damage to dwellings.

Non-violent household crimes

- Housebreaking and burglary: includes getting into someone's dwelling without permission and stealing or try to steal something; but excludes: thefts from holiday houses, garages, sheds or lock-ups, unless these are used as dwellings (places where people actually live).
- Attempted housebreaking and burglary: occurs when there is evidence that someone tried to gain access into the dwelling unsuccessfully, with the intention of stealing, eg. damage to locks, doors or windows, or scratches around the locks.
- Theft of livestock, poultry and other animals: involves actual stealing of animals such as cattle, sheep, goats, donkeys, rabbits and chickens or pets.
- Theft of motor vehicles (excluding hijacking): involves the stealing of a vehicle such as a car, van, truck or bakkie, when nobody is present in the vehicle.
- Theft of goods from vehicles: includes theft of car radios or goods which have been left in the car, or theft of a part of the car, such as a car mirror or steering wheel.
- Motor vehicle vandalism: includes deliberate damage to parts of a motor vehicle, such as a car, van, truck or bakkie. (usually occurs when things are stolen from vehicles)
- Theft of motor cycles, motor scooters: includes the stealing of a motor cycle, motor scooter or similar vehicle that any member of the household had access to, made regular use of or owned.
- Theft of bicycles: occurs when a bicycle owned by any member of the household is stolen.

All non-violent household crimes are property crimes.

Individual crimes:

These are crimes committed against an individual, and they affect the individual rather than the whole household. For example, pickpocketing or theft of a purse.

Violent individual crimes

- Sexual offences (including rape and domestic sexual abuse): includes grabbing, touching or sexually assaulting or raping someone
- Robbery involving force: includes taking something from someone by using force or threatening him/her. For example, pointing a knife at someone and robbing them.
- Assaults and threats of assault (including domestic violence and sexual abuse): occurs when a person is attacked, physically beaten or threatened by someone in a way that is really frightening, without the attacker taking anything from the victim.

All violent individual crimes are 'contact' crimes

Non-violent individual crimes

- Fraud: means consumer fraud or someone cheating another by selling him or her something inferior, or delivering a service of inferior quality, or selling the wrong quality.
- Corruption by public officials: involves public officials such as police officers or customs officials accepting payment for services rendered.
- Theft of personal property: includes pickpocketing, stealing of a purse, wallet, clothing, jewelry or sports equipment, without the use of force.

All non-violent individual crimes are property crimes.
