Which cities have the largest (and the most expensive) homes?

If you're dreaming of one day purchasing a holiday home, and space is important to you, Durban might be the best option. On the other hand, if property costs are your main concern, East London might be a place to consider.

Building plans with the most generous floor area were approved by eThekwini (Durban), for houses, townhouses and flats. Over a five-year period from 2012 to 2016, the average floor area for a dwelling-house in South Africa's third-most populous city was 233 m<sup>2</sup>.

Construction costs in eThekwini are also the most expensive, but only for houses and flats. Tshwane takes the top spot for townhouses; it would cost you an average of R8 575 per square metre to build a townhouse in the capital city.

Provincial government spending

The public education and healthcare systems in South Africa are administered by provincial government. These two functions are the largest expenditure items on provincial government's balance sheet, according to data released in Stats SA's Financial statistics of provincial government report.

Provincial government spent R202 billion on education in 2015/16, slightly more than the R150 billion spent on health.

For more information how provincial government spends your tax money, download the Financial statistics of provincial government release here.
