

Recorded live births

Co-operation between Statistics South Africa (Stats SA), the citizens of the country, the private sector and government institutions is essential for a successful statistical system. Without continued co-operation and goodwill, the timely release of relevant and reliable official statistics will not be possible.

Stats SA publishes approximately three hundred different releases each year. It is not economically viable to produce them in more than one of South Africa's eleven official languages. Since the releases are used extensively, not only locally, but also by international economic and social-scientific communities, Stats SA releases are published in English only.

KEY FINDINGS

RECORDED LIVE BIRTHS, 2001

The total number of births registered during 2001 was marginally greater than that registered during 2000. The number of registered births increased by 1,82% from 1 407 833 in 2000 to 1 433 432 in 2001.

Introduction

The historical overview of recorded live birth statistics in South Africa and their official reporting has been outlined in a previous issue of Statistical release P0305 (1990-2000). In this issue we present registration figures for 2001 for recorded live births. We continue with the dual reporting on recorded live births by using the date of birth in the Population Register (occurrence-based reporting), and the date of registration of the birth as established by Stats SA (registration-based reporting). An explanation of the relationship between these two sets of data is provided in the explanatory notes.

Registration-based reporting of live births

The total annual number of registered live births in South Africa at the end of 2000 was 1 407 833 and this increased by 1,82% to 1 433 432 in December 2001. Even though the 2001 increase is not as significant as in previous years, this increase is a continuation of a trend that has been occurring since 1992, as shown in Figure 1. The total number of live birth registrations for any given year comprises both current registrations (for births registered in the year of birth) and late registrations (for live births registered later than the year of birth). Figure 1 shows that the bulk of total registration comprises of late registrations.

Occurrence-based reporting of live births

The Population Register, in effect, gives the number of live births that have been updated for lateness in reporting. Some details about the South African Population Register are given in the explanatory notes. Table 1.1 shows the number of live births broken down by sex and citizenship of the child, from 1990 till 2001, as reflected in the Population Register as at 02 April 2002. The number of updated registered live births for 2001 stood at 407 359, as at the April 2002 reading of the Population Register. The sex ratios at birth for the updated occurrence are greater than one for all the years, from 1990-2001, with the exception of 1992.

A comparison of the trend of registered live births (corrected for lateness) at two or more points in time can help to show the actual trend in births. Figure 2 shows an annual comparison of recorded live births, for the periods 1991-1997 (as at 11 September 1999), 1991-2000 (as at 03 April 2001) and 1991-2001 (as at 02 April 2002). Even with the updating that occurred between these three periods, the pattern of declining fertility remains the same for all this periods. The trend shows a smooth gradual decline for the period from 1991-2000, supporting the evidence of declining fertility in South Africa.

Table 1.2 shows the monthly distribution of recorded live births and Figures 3a and 3b reflect these numbers graphically. While a generally downward trend in overall live births is reflected in Figures 3a and 3b, the graphical presentation of births by month of occurrence highlights two striking features over the years. Firstly, there is a decline in the number of live births for all the months. Secondly, seasonal variation of births clearly indicates that the month, in which childbearing is highest, for years prior to 2000 is September, followed by March. The noticeable seasonality in births comes out more clearly in the earlier period (1991-1995) than in the latter period (1996-2000).

Comparison between occurrence and registration-based reporting of live births

Tables 1.3 and 1.4 show the relationship between the year of occurrence of births and the year of registration. Looking diagonally down Table 1.3, one sees that, with the exception of 1998, births occurring during a certain year and registered in the same year have been increasing since 1993. From Figure 4, it can also be observed that, for all the occurrence years, registration is highest in the year of birth. From 1991-1995, it can be noted that the second highest number of births was registered four to seven years after birth. However, from 1995-1999, the second highest number of registration occurs in the year after birth. For the live births that occurred prior to 1995, there is a steady increase in birth registrations after the third year until school-going age, after which, registration starts to taper off.

Table 1.4 shows a comparison of total annual live births against registration. The number of births that were registered between 1991 and 1994 clearly falls short of the births that occurred. From 1995 till 2001 registrations exceeded occurrences, but the difference between the two is expected to decrease as the Population Register is updated. It is hard to give a definite interpretation on what is going on. The births that occurred in the earlier years, 1991-1994, have been updated for a longer period than those of the more recent years, 1995-2001. It is possible that, given sufficient time for updating live births in the later period, a similar pattern as shown for the earlier period will emerge. On the other hand, it is possible that the increase in birth registration five to seven years after birth (largely due to enrolment in school) is now being overtaken by an increase in birth registration two years after birth. This latter phenomenon could be due to improved awareness about birth registration or due to the enrolment of infants in day-care centres.

Registration-based reporting of live births with geographic breakdown

Figure 5 shows the proportion of total live births registrations by province for 2001. KwaZulu-Natal had the highest total number of live birth registrations, followed by Eastern Cape and Gauteng, while Northern Cape had the lowest total number of birth registration for the year 2001. In Figure 6 the provincial distribution of current registration is shown while that of the late registration is shown in Figure 7. The provinces with the largest number of current annual registrations for 2001 were Gauteng, KwaZulu-Natal and Western Cape. The provinces that recorded a high number of late registrations were KwaZulu-Natal, Eastern Cape and Limpopo. Northern Cape had the lowest number of current and late registrations for 2001.

Tables 2.1 show a geographical breakdown of registrations for 2001. In each province, the majority of registered births occur in few districts/municipalities. For the Western Cape more than half of the births in the province occurred in the following districts, which fall under the City of Cape Town Municipality: Bellville, Cape Town, Wynberg, and Mitchells Plain. For Gauteng almost half of the registered births occurred in Johannesburg (in the City of Johannesburg Metropolitan Municipality) and Pretoria (in the City of Tshwane Municipality). Similarly, for KwaZulu-Natal, Durban (in the Durban Metropolitan Municipality), Lower Umfolozi (in the Mbonambi Municipality) and Pietermaritzburg (in the Msunduzi Municipality) accounted for more than a quarter of all the registered births. Durban (in the Durban Metropolitan Municipality) accounted for almost a third of all births delivered and registered in the same year in KwaZulu-Natal. For Northern Cape, more than half of all births delivered in 2001 and registered in the same year occurred in Kimberley (in the Diamonds Fields District Managed Area Municipality) and Gordonia (in the Ikheis Municipality).

Tables 3.1 show a geographical breakdown of registrations by sex. No apparent difference in registration by sex can be observed from the data. Tables 4.1 show a comparison of the age of the parents, in five-year age groups. In 2001, for women, childbearing peak was between the age of 20 and 29. The modal childbearing age for men occurs at a higher age group, 30-34.

EXPLANATORY NOTES

Source of data

The two sets of birth statistics that are reported here (occurrence-based and reporting-based) come from the same source, namely, Nucleus Bureau. When the clerks at the various offices of the Department of Home Affairs (DHA) capture the information about a birth, they do so directly onto the database at Nucleus Bureau. These transactions are used to update the Population Register database. A more detailed narrative on eligibility for inclusion in the Population Register is given below.

For the purpose of producing vital statistics, the following system is followed: every day all the (civil) transactions done at all the DHA offices are written onto a cassette. At the end of every month, a combined set of cassettes is created containing all the transactions done for the month. These transactions are read and the birth transactions are extracted for processing at Stats SA. The year in which the births are registered is the registration or processing year. Using this information, Stats SA shows the breakdown of the births registered according to the year in which the births occurred.

While birth information sent to Stats SA is the same as that in the Population Register, there is a difference of format between the two. Stats SA's data is based on births registered during the year (registration-based). On the other hand, entries on the Population Register reflect the date of birth. The date of registration of birth is not stored on the Population Registration file. For this reason, the Population Register can only be used to obtain births data broken down by date of birth (occurrence-based). By continuously updating the Population Register for late registration, the occurrence-based data from the Population Register gets closer and closer to the true level of births. In a situation where birth registrations are complete (with very few late registrations), the occurrence-based perspective (with reported births for a given year updated for the same year's births registered later) is similar to the registration based perspective (with all reported births for a given year considered irrespective of year of occurrence) are nearly the same. However, if there are a large number of late registrations, the two perspectives become widely dissimilar. With improvements in birth registration, the recorded data from the two sources will gradually converge.

South African Population Register

The South African Population Register deals with births, deaths, identity, marriages, divorces and movements of all South African citizens and permanent residents. Thus, each of the Acts dealing with any aspect of civil registration has implications for the information inputted onto the Population Register. The Births and Deaths Registration Act, 1992 (Act No. 51 of 1992) guides the registration of births and death throughout South Africa. The Birth and Death Registration Act No. 51 of 1992 was subsequently amended in 1997 (Act No. 67 of 1997) and in 1998 (Act No. 43 of 1998). Another Act that is pertinent to the Population Register is the Identification Act that was passed in 1997 (Act No. 68 of 1997). This Act repealed previous Identification Acts (Act No.72 of 1986, Act No. 21 of 1991, Act No. 4 of 1993 and Act No. 47 of 1995). From these various Acts and amendments, the following can be said about those persons whose particulars are eligible to be included on the Population Register:

- All children born of South African citizens and permanent residents when the notice of the birth is given within one year after the birth of the child.
- All children born of South African citizens and permanent residents when the notice of the birth is given one year after the birth of the child together with the prescribed requirement for a late registration of birth.
- All South African citizens and permanent residents who upon attainment of the age of 16 applied for and were granted identification cards.
- All South African citizens and permanent residents who die at any age after birth.
- All South African citizens and permanent residents who depart permanently from South Africa.

Persons whose particulars are not eligible for inclusion on the population register are listed below:

- Non-South African citizens who sojourn temporarily in the country.
- All South African citizens and permanent residents who died before notice of his/her birth had been given.

Municipal demarcation

Prior to 1994, there were about 1 300 municipalities throughout South Africa. These were reduced to 843, following the 1995/1996 local government elections. Subsequently, the Municipal Demarcation Act of 1998 (Act 27 of 1998) established the Municipal Demarcation Board and charged it with the responsibility of determining new municipal boundaries for the country. In this report we show the magisterial district along side the closest municipality to which it is geographically related. We show the percentage of the district that falls in that municipality.

DEFINITION OF CONCEPTS USED

- 1.1 Live birth is the complete expulsion or extraction from its mother's womb of a product of conception, irrespective of duration of the pregnancy, which after such separation, breathes or shows any other evidence of life.
- 1.2 Recorded live births - Recorded live births (birth registrations) indicate the number of births recorded (registered) in a specific year, irrespective of when the birth actually occurred. The births recorded in any given year include the births that occurred during that year plus other births that occurred in years prior to the year of registration. It should be noted that not all births are recorded (registered).
- 1.3 Late registration - Births occurring in a given calendar year but recorded in subsequent calendar years.
- 1.4 Population group - As from 1991 no distinction is made between the different population groups in the information collected by the Department of Home Affairs. The statistics collected, therefore, refer to all population groups combined.
- 1.5 Magisterial districts - (Tables 2.1 and 3.1). Due to changes in boundaries of magisterial districts, the data from 1994 are not comparable in all regards with those of previous years. As from 1994 the twelfth edition of the Statistics South Africa, Standard Code List of Areas, Report No. 09-09-03 (1994), has been followed.
- 1.6 Municipality boundary - (Tables 2.1 and 3.1) There are three categories of municipalities in terms of the Constitution: category A (metropolitan), category B (local) and category C (district).
- 1.7 Stillbirths - A stillbirth is a death prior to the expulsion or extraction from its mother's womb of a product of conception, irrespective of duration of pregnancy. That indicates the death after such separation, the child does not breathe or show other evidence of life. Prior to 1997, stillbirths were reported as a separate column, but in the same release as live births. Stillbirths for 1997 and later years are now to be published in a separate statistical release.
